She also hopes to find the valise which her father had with him at Norfolk, and which contained securities valued at nearly $100,000. This valise, she believed, he had with him in his state room on the steamer, but it cannot be found now.

Mr. Harrison, who retired from business over twenty years ago, has been travelling a good deal during the past few years, with the hope of benefitting his health. Although nearly eighty years old, he was still vigorous and never complained of heart or any other trouble. He always carried considerable money about with him, and principally for that reason objected to any one staying in the same stateroom with him at night. He also objected to the use of tobacco in any form.

Accompanied by his daughter, he left Boston for Norfolk five days $20, and on reaching Norfolk she went shopping, while he went to an express office, where he left his valise, with instructions to send it to the Old Dominion dock. The check which he received in exchange he put in his pocket.

Mrs. Oliver always purchased the travelling tickets, but on this occasion her father was feeling so ill that he could not wait for her. so, recurring his own beeth in a stateroom on the Guyandoute, he boarded the vessel and went to sleep. She returned later and secured a berth for herself.

"When I saw him that afternoon," Mrs. Oliver said to an "Evening World" reporter this morning, "he complained that another gentleman had been put in the same room with him, and wanted to know if he could not get a berth in some other part of the boat. I told him to try and put up with it until the morning, as it would be only for a short time anyhow.

Capt. Smith. Superintendent of the Old Dominion line, was particularly anxious about the missing valles, and induced Mrs. Oliver to make a written statement in the office about its disappearance. I have questioned all the porters and deck hands, and am satisfied they tell the truth. It must be that he left it behind at Norfolk, and all this talk about foul play is nonsense. Even Mrs. Oliver does not believe it.

Mrs. Oliver and her brother are the only children living of Mr. Harrison's family, and their mother died many years ago. for the future had taken the place of the nervous anxiety and dread which has pervaded Wall street during the past few weeks, and especially within the last hree or four days, when the crisis in the money market culminated. The first indication of this change of sentiment was observed in the reports form the London market, which was received by the early cables. These stated that although the action of President Cleveland in calling Congress together earlier than he had at first intended, had been partially discounted in view of the rumors that tremendous pressure had been brought to bear upon him to change his plans.

The announcement, however, of his proclamation had the immediate effect of creating a buoyancy in the market for American securities in the foreign market, and they nearly all opened this morning at an advance over restreday's closing prices in the New York market. This advance ranged from 1-4 to 1 percent, and all showed a marked gain over the London closing prices of yesterday. Even silver, which has been unmercifully hammered in the London market during the past two days, made a big jump, and rather unexpectedly, too, for the dealers on this side of the water, and sales were reported at 33 1-2d, per ounce for buillion, which is an advance of 3d, over the last quotations yesterday. At this figure the market was reported as strong and having an upward tendency.
